the events recorded may be divided without too great inequality into six spatial divisions of which one only contains events in Europe. All the others are parts of what we call the East. On the left of the dates Europe is followed by the Levant, or Near East, comprising Egypt, Byzantium and Arabia, and Western Asia, or the Middle East, comprising Asia Minor, Mesopotamia and Persia. The Far East follows the dates — first India, then China, and finally Japan.

Most of the back of the six-fold sheet is given up to a partial glossary of names and terms to be indicated in the Synopsis by heavy-faced type. The final page of the folder contains a small outline map recalling by its lettering the six regional columns of the table.

The Synopsis has already received a warm welcome where it has been shown and will, it is hoped, prove useful to students of fine art generally in our museums, schools and colleges. Many persons beyond school years will doubtless also find it a convenience to possess in portable form a framework of important events in proper chronological relation, upon which to fasten in place other historical knowledge. The compilers of the Synopsis have been keenly alive to the difficulty of their task and expect that their own and others' criticism will result materially in improving the table in future.

The Synopsis will be sold at the entrances of the Museum at ten cents a copy, or one dollar per dozen, and $7.50 per hundred. Orders may also be addressed to the Secretary of the Museum, adding 1 cent postage for single copies, 3 cents for a dozen, and 20 cents for one hundred copies.
